The conference aims at outlining and showcasing an innovative methodology of intervention for delivering relief in protracted crises and paving the way for reconstruction and development. The case of the project "Agriculture and Livestock Support for Syrian People", funded by the Italian and UK Cooperation and implemented by CIHEAM Bari since 2015 will be presented, with a special focus on some of the tools used by the project: remote technical assistance, remote direct management and a revolving fund. These methodologies will be outlined with the view to better understand how they have succeeded in generating positive results and how they can be adapted to other fragile contexts where direct access is not possible.
